Executive Officer,
Wheaton Precious
Metals Corp;
Chairman of the Board, World Gold
Council

The global Mining and Metals sector has a foundational role to play in a world increasingly reliant on low carbon energy solutions. In addition to the sectors' fundamental contribution to the economy and society, there is an expanding need for certain metals to be used as vital precursors in the electrification supply chain. Given the expanding role of the sector in a 21st century low carbon arena, tangible and transparent performance on Net Zero, ESG and Purpose will become table stakes. Stand-out performance on Sustainability will be a catalyst for competitiveness and long term survivability. What will it take to get there?

THE EVENT WILL ADDRESS:

Investor Lens – What is the macro view of the sector and where do we anticipate disruption and opportunity in the near term and long term?

Net Zero is a daunting undertaking for this carbon intensive sector – what are the realistic pathways and timelines? What is the optimal transparent barometer of progress on Sustainability in addition to standard disclosures?

The value of a "Purpose Strategy".

Net Zero and ESG strategies are bound to be compromised unless they are both tethered to "Purpose". What are the key barriers and opportunities to making this a reality? How do we foresee "Purpose" being embedded into this sector? Are there firms that have already dared to leap?
